

THE ADVANTAGES OF AN AUSTRALIAN CARD

Created by Robert (Bob) Buick 20 September 2019

Would having an AUSTRALIAN CARD issued to all citizens be a breach of our privacy? I say NO, and outline the need for such an identification card.

The card would be like any financial debit/credit with embedded personal information but would include a photograph of the cardholder.

Why does Australia need this?

Well to start issuing such a card to citizens only with only the citizenry population of about twenty million is fiscally advantageous that start on twenty years from now with maybe thirty million.

Here is a list to why we need an Australian Citizen Identity Card and its uses.

1. Personal ID information embedded in a chip that is similar to debit/credit cards and your state driver's licence. Included in the chip would be, your eye-iris image, your DNA, your blood group and other medical information needed by medical practitioners, and maybe your criminal record if deemed required.
2. Why would such a card be? Well, besides required for daily ID, it is needed for electronic voting that is coming. Then there is the possible one might be done in, and your skeleton remains twenty or thirty years later, as your DNA is recorded within the card chip and on a data bank of citizens family and authorities will know who you are.
3. Such a card has been talked about in governments' and known by many citizens since the nineteen-eighties, yet, there is opposition only from the left socialists, and one can wonder why the debate opposing such a card. Governments and their agencies know all the need to know of each of us for a myriad of reasons.
4. Those that rail against such an ID card may claim it would cost too much. Yes, if each card costs two dollars ($2) to per citizen, then the total would be forty million ($40M) in total and if the issuing program is over five or ten years the cost will quickly be absorbed in the budget.
5. Comments to strait8@bigpond.com